RAILROAD INTERVIEWED IN CHICAGO

Denis Kearney in Chicago

Special Dispatch to the Morning Oregonian.

CHICAGO July 1.—[Special.] Denis Kearney, the sand-lot agitator, arrived in this city this morning from Salt Lake. He came here for the purpose of addressing a meeting of workingmen this evening, but the meeting was postponed two days in order to give Kearney time to get his bearings. He has been in Salt Lake two days, and has addressed two meetings there. He left San Francisco on the 19th ult., and has been on the road ever since. He says he has not been feeling well, and has been taking it easy. He will remain in Chicago two days, and will then go to Omaha, where he will address a meeting on the 4th inst. He will then go to Cheyenne, Denver, Leadville, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Albany, Troy, Boston, Worcester, Providence, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Norfolk, Petersburg, Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Augusta, Atlanta, Macon, Montgomery, Mobile, New Orleans, Galveston, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, El Paso, Tucson, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey, San Jose, Oakland, and San Francisco. He says he has no fears at the present outlook as to meeting with success in all the places mentioned. He says the convention for the incorporation of trades for the regulation of railroads will be held in Chicago on the 15th inst., and will be attended by delegates from all parts of the country. He says he believes railroad freight rates are too high, and that they should be reduced. He says he believes the time will come when the laboring classes on the coast were receiving adequate compensation, and that the agitation of the Chinese restriction bill of 1882 was unnecessary. He says mechanics and farm laborers were receiving over half California's wealth, and that it was not California's wealth as it had never been developed. He says California was now only beginning to be known, and that it was now booming there, except in the matter of labor. He declares it is an injustice to

MONDAY MORNING JUNE 2 1883

THE BALCH CASE

According to a city newspaper the friends of J H Mitchell say that the discussion of the suppressed records of the Balch case demonstrates beyond all doubt or cavil the following facts

That the charges of fraud corruption and swindling would not stand for a moment in the administration of justice if they would allow this matter to rest To set forth his recklessness in the Balch case is to repeat a twice or thrice told tale but it shall be repeated in the interest of truth honesty and justice as often as the assertion is made in behalf of that business conduct there was anything else in its methods or its features than the ordinary shrewd children of their circumstance

The opinion of the supreme court which was announced last week has not yet been written Its scope is consequently not exactly known but it is reported that the decision turned upon a point which stripped the case of all of the features of an examination into the whole of Mitchell's swindling transactions and hence so much of the false transactions as were palpably fraudulent on their face were not discussed at all Hon Mitchell far from being exonerated in fact is where the original evidence left him A exoneration in fact is impossible It is the opinion of every one who has carefully examined this case that Mitchell's agency in it constitutes the blackest chapter of his career—so far as that career is known—a statement which sufficiently exhausts all the stock of comparatives and superlatives which language affords In a word the case of the Balch heirs stands in a clear light the way in which orphan children may be robbed of a patrimony by an unscrupulous lawyer and also the peculiar way in which Mitchell practices his profession

Briefly stated these are the facts of which there is no possible refutation Danford Balch and wife were the owners of the land adjoining the northwest part of this city commonly known to Portland people as the Balch tract Balch died and his widow, after some years married a worthless sort of man by the name of John Confer, who is also remembered by most people who have lived many years in Portland. This Confer after his marriage to the widow Balch, made his home at the Balch residence At the time of the marriage several of Balch's children were infants. Some of these continued to live with their mother and step-father at the home provided for them by their father during his life, and others—one or two—were put out to live with relatives or went out to work wherever they could find a home and earn their own living They had a hard enough and sad enough life of it, as the testimony shows, and those who were at home with their mother appear to have fared quite as badly as the rest They were brought up, or rather came up with little education, and none of the comforts of home life But the children owned one-half the "Balch tract of land subject how ever, to a life estate of their mother and as the property was valuable and its value increasing, it was expected they would on coming of age have something with which to make a start in the world This hope was not to be realized, for the legal adviser of their mother and of Confer was J H Mitchell In 1868 a petition was presented to the county court, signed by Confer and his wife through Mitchell, their attorney praying the appointment of a guardian for the children, and there upon C S Silver, a man well known as one of Mitchell's willing servitors, was appointed their guardian Mrs Confer's helpless ignorance was such that she signed the petition for a guardian by making a cross mark Silver did not qualify as guardian in any manner signify his acceptance of the trust until 1870 about two years after his appointment. Then he fixed his bond as guardian and in a very short time thereafter—Mitchell being by this time his attorney—presented an application to the court for an order to sell the land of the children to pay the expenses of their care and maintenance The interest of these infant children in the land was valued by the appraisers at $11,000, and the interest of Mrs Confer's life-estate at the same figure, making the total valuation of the property $33,000 But what expenses had been incurred in maintaining the children? Silver, the guardian, had never had them in his custody an hour and had expended nothing upon them

But Confer, their mother's husband—their stepfather—presented claims amounting to $5884 for keeping the children, when, in fact, he had lived upon their inheritance These claims Mitchell got the court to allow, the guardian making no opposition, but reporting them as valid claims, and the children, of course being helpless to oppose any objection The order of sale was made, and when the property was put up to sell Mitchell purchased it in his own name for $5350 But in the meantime he had procured a transfer to himself of Confer's spurious claims against the children, paying Confer therefor, as the testimony of Confer discloses, the pitiful sum of $1000—and that in various odds, ends and dribbles, chips and whetstones as the saying goes. Those claims he turned in at their face on the purchase, and Silver testifies that he did not pay any money Thus he had possessed himself of the children's interest which had been appraised at $11 000, and there so received absolutely nothing for it for they had fully earned their poor living. But he had also gotten hold of Mrs Confer's life estate valued also at $11,000 at a cost of $1100 So for less than $2500 he had now gotten into his hands the property of this illiterate and helpless woman and her infant children valued at $22,000—he, the friend and legal adviser of the woman and of the children's guardian To end the dark chapter he then turned round and sold the property to Mr Goldsmith for $15,000 cash and put the money into his pocket

These facts appear in the record of the case, and the only points upon which Mitchell in his testimony pretends to dispute the facts as we have stated them is that he says the amount he allowed Confer for the bogus claims in the way of settling accounts with him, was more than $1000, not stating what the amount was while Confer testifies positively it was only $1000 In all other material particulars there is no pretense of contradiction or denial

Though the opinion of the supreme court has not yet been written there is a report which is probably correct that it rests on the point that the Balch heirs were not residents of Multnomah county and as they were not within the jurisdiction of the county court the proceedings in the matter of the estate were null This finding if correctly reported so far from vindicating Mitchell in fact adds a new count to the indictment against him We he or was he not aware that the heirs were not residents of Multnomah county? If not aware of it, he proceeded in a stupid and unpardonable way with an important business if aware of it the facts would tend to show that he had the business brought into Multnomah from another county in order to consummate a scheme of swindling He realized no doubt, that it was useless to go into another county to carry out his plan Here the machinery was in his hands Here was his professional administrator here were his helpers in his pecuniary in the issuing of fraudulent papers, his favorable county court and all the machinery very willingly lending itself to the consummation of the fraud Here he could feel himself comparatively safe from responsibility and detection and here was the only place where he could carry out his scheme

In the course of the proceedings in the case there was a time when it looked as if the decision of the court would be against Mitchell and the latter was very much disturbed about it Then it was that he made the statement that he had "acted in this matter as he always acted in business matters" and that he was willing to abide by the decision of the court Then it was that he made the statement that he had "acted in this matter as he always acted in business matters" and that he was willing to abide by the decision of the court

After a protracted inquiry through the agency of a commission and after an examination into the question of the whole subject, the legislature of New York instead of selling, for a price the old railway the corporation by statute placed the whole matter in the hands of the people to be disposed of in such way as they should think best for the public interest. Public opinion will compel the trustees to see that the franchise is not sold for less than its value, and that the money derived from the sale is properly applied. The people of New York have shown that they are capable of managing their own affairs, and that they will not allow any corporation to control them. The people of New York have shown that they are capable of managing their own affairs, and that they will not allow any corporation to control them.

Notable miscarriages of justice which afford some singular coincidences are reported simultaneously from Marion county Or and Colusa county Cal In the former case a man named Cannon shot Senator Voorhees, intending to kill him Four members of the jury think no crime was committed In the latter case a man named Miller shot and killed Dr Glenn The jury divided as in the Oregon case—four members for it appearing to think that Dr Glenn was properly "removed" In both cases the sportsmen was done by hired men who didn't take their employers Favorite county, Pa is not the only locality where juries are peculiar Mr Voorhees has reason to be thankful that Colusa county Cal will not shall not have a different light the matter will end with Cannon's discharge Whether Dr Glenn has a son or not we do not know

Some very great fool writes in a very unscrupulous Democratic organ that The Oregonian raises a great row at every election unless it is provided for How provided for? The Oregonian is an independent newspaper, asking no patronage from any party and receiving none It provides for itself through its own legitimate business asks no odds of bosses, rings or machines and will raise a row just as often as their conduct challenges its criticism The independence of The Oregonian has been and now leaves the ring of gains to be provided for" by the bosses and to do the work which the bosses require nor carries them for a moment the dole gratuitously paid in acknowledgement of their services and servility

For a considerable time Mr Blaine has been giving the greater part of his time to the preparation of his book of political memoirs It is reported that this work will be probably issued in two or more volumes, and will cover the history of about twenty five years during which Mr Blaine has been in political life The work is partly ready for the printer and it is said that the author declares that he has no apprehensions of injuring himself by the personal comments and portraits which to a great extent must form the material of his book Mr Conkling must not be behind Mr Blaine in anything, so he too has resolved to fulfill the wish of that man on the keen scent of revenge who wanted his enemy to write a book Undoubtedly there will be great curiosity to compare the two productions

The north and the south are represented in the July number of the Century by two papers on John Brown's raid at Harper's Ferry the first by Frank P Sanborn of Massachusetts the second by Alexander R Boteler of Virginia A portrait of the famous old fanatic forms the frontispiece of the number Before us we are reminded that John Brown's soul is marching on by the fact that our grandmothers and progressive democratic contemporary the Standard yesterday had an item setting out in the center at a missing to sell at last Portland John Brown's Soul Marching Toronto Georgia and other patriotic songs would be confirmed

The St Louis Globe Democrat tells the following story as a column of comfort for the unsuccessful government counsel in the star route cases

At the close of an important trial a few years ago the prosecuting attorney was heard to object with the fact that he had not secured a conviction of the accused Mr said he I didn't convict him but as the old farmer said of the will the boy that he stood at didn't kill Abel so he didn't count slightly when the result of his life

The inference is drawn that Messrs Dorsey and Brady will no more be found resting with the high flying, birds of American political life probably correct

No democratic leader has so condensed in so few pressing words the true and facts of the political situation as does Senator Beck in the interview reported with him in New York His view of the matter is that The majority of the people of the United States are tired of what you might call republicanism but I don't think that we can be trusted

The jury in the case of Mrs Nettie Leigh Jones of Dakota was evidently convinced on, but what a jury can do and a man of great influence The Cincinnati Times somewhat remarks that a state which permits a jury capable of acquitting Dukes was to be able to produce one capable of convicting Nick

Since January 1 no less than ten steamers have been stranded on the bar at the entrance of New York harbor The Columbia bar it would seem is not quite right

The Richmond (Indiana) Telegram tells the following story as a specimen

Real Estate Market.

The following special report of the real estate market is furnished THE SUNDAY OREGONIAN by J. Fred Clark & Co.'s real estate agents:

The business of the week as shown by the records was $60 965 that of the corresponding week of last year was $88 888. Last week we failed to make a report the business done was $69 last, that of the corresponding week of 1882 being $20 883. It is gratifying to know that the last month of the first half of the current year shows a very considerable gain over, that of the last, the total for the last four weeks of 1882 being $321 370 10, whilst that of 1883 amounts to $329 185 55.

The following is a synopsis of the past week's transactions:

	Deeds	Amount
Country	1	$ 550 00
City	7	16,800 00
Couch	6	3,900 00
Carolands	14	2,550 00
Albina	7	2,475 00
St Johns	1	600 00
East Portland	2	301 00
Bond for deed, county	1	100 00
Total	39	$ 69,986 00

Self-Destruction of the Jury System.

Pittsburg Dispatch.

The events of the past two days furnish a remarkable commentary upon the degree of justice secured by the present administration of the jury system.

The public reception of the shooting of Dukes, by young Bush on Wednesday night, furnishes the first instance. Here is a man who was declared by a jury to have been innocent of any crime but when he is killed by the son of his victim, the act receives an all-but universal approval. It would have been the jury's duty to punish an ordinary murder, a wish it would have been a high crime for the murderer. When the prima facie case is reversed, could there be a more overwhelming refutation of popular condemnation for the verdict a jury in such a case by the expressions with which young Watts' act is received?

The star route verdict is another instance. The evidence leaves little doubt of guilt on the part of some of the accused. The charge of the judge which even the defendants acknowledge to be impartial, shows this. Yet the jury after three hours of sedulous exhibit an of incompetence and infatuation, acquits the entire gang.

It is not necessary to go back of these cases to show the contempt into which the process of justice is falling. Unless there can soon be a marked improvement in the feelings are and juries it will not be long before trial by jury will seem but a mockery and a farce.

Mr. Blaine has thrown his testimony into the vexed question whether the Maine prohibitory law really prohibits. He says: "There are no people in the United States or the world among whom so much of intoxicating liquor is consumed as among the 650 000 inhabitants of Maine."

In the opinion of the Albany Argus if Dorsey proposes a lawsuit against every journal that has spoken of him as a "star route thief" he might as well take up a newspaper directory and go through the whole list leaving out the Washington Republican and a few stalwart steels.
